What is the Rize Above Respectful Relationships Program?

The program wants to help you understand what is and isn't healthy in relationships. As part of this, you will get to watch videos and play games. It is delivered by Relationships Australia South Australia and funded by the Department of Social Services.

What information do you want from me... do I have to give it to do the program?

We ask for an Avatar name (you can make this up), your gender, and age when you register. This is needed to create your profile. We can see your Avatar name, so pick any name you like!

We also want to know how the program helped you and what you learned. So at the end there is an optional survey. Do it if you want – don't do it if you don't!

Everyone who answers the survey can enter the prize draw for a $25 Visa gift card. There will be one winner each month until 31 December 2021. If you are completing as part of our in-school program you will also be invited to complete later surveys.

How will you use my information... will anyone know it's me?

Your answers to games and surveys will be used anonymously (no one will know it's you). We will use them to understand how well the program works, and any improvements to make it better. We will only use this information as a group (e.g., "60% of 12-16 year old girls said this...").

To help our funding, we will share anonymous group information with our funder so they know how the program is going. They won't know you've done the program or anything about you.

Where does my information go... is it secure?

Any information from your profile or survey answers will be kept private by Relationships Australia South Australia. It will be password protected and only a few of us working on the program will have access. We will only use the information as described above.

I have a question... how can I find out more?
